2. Basic Terminology

Cryptocurrency is a digital or virtual currency that is secured using cryptography. You've probably heard of Bitcoin (BTC), which was the first successful decentralized cryptocurrency. This document is for informational purposes only and does not constitute an offer or solicitation to sell shares or securities in G-Mbel or any related or associated company. Any such offer or solicitation will be made only by means of a confidential offering memorandum and in accordance with the terms of all applicable securities and other laws.

This means it functions without a central computer or bank. Instead, Bitcoin and other cryptocurrencies rely on a public ledger system called the blockchain which exists on multiple nodes (computers with copies of the blockchain). Peer-to-peer transactions are carried out by miners, which compute the correct values to satisfy the hash function in the blockchain. The blockchain is made up of a linear sequence of blocks, or files that permanently record cryptocurrency transaction data.

Ethereum is a blockchain featuring smart contracts which are programs which enforce a contractual relationship with cryptographic code. This means that contracts between parties are carried out exactly as programmed. Ether (ETH) is the currency designed as "fuel" for the Ethereum blockchain. However, the standards such as ERC20 also allow anyone to develop a token which can operate on the Ethereum blockchain. GMBEL is one example of an ERC20 compliant token.
